Change, For Sure

In his very successful recent book, "The Big Change," Frederic Lewis Allen, long-time editor of Harp's magazine and a popular historian of high standing, serves that the American people believe "that we have demonstrated that business can be far more successfully and vigorously run by private managers; and, furthermore, that the private managers can run it if not all of it with such consideration for the general public welfare that they can achieve for us all that government ownership would bring, plus the efficiency, flexibility and adventurousness which government ownership would jeopardize — and without the danger of tyranny that government ownership might bring. In short, there is a subconscious agreement among the vast majority of Americans that the United States is not evolving toward socialism, but past socialism."

A short time ago, the best known and most respected Socialist in the United States, Norman Thomas, published a pamphlet entitled "Democratic Socialism—a New Appraisal." In this brief but significant work, Thomas said that if the state owned all industry—which is the old goal of the classical Socialist—a top heavy bureaucracy would result. He said that the traditional program demanding complete state ownership of the means of production is no longer feasible and that, "We have learned that it is possible, to a degree anticipated by most earlier Socialists, to impose desirable social controls on privately owned enterprises through the development of social planning, by proper taxation and labor legislation, and by the growth of powerful labor organizations." He then pointed out that socialism has been a political failure so far as attracting a large number of voters is concerned. This is dem-onstrably true. In 1912, Socialist candidate Eugene Debs rolled up some 900,000 votes. In 1948, Mr. Thomas, making the last six campaigns on the Socialist ticket, gathered only 130,000, even though the vote then was much larger than in the earlier year.

The last election certainly drove another nail into the Socialist coffin in this country. Governor Stevenson, of course, did not run as a friend of socialism, but he was the inheritor of policies and programs which many people regard as being definitely socialistic. Virtually all such policies and programs were made targets by General Eisenhower, and it can hardly be denied that his stand on these contributed to his landslide win.

Obviously, what has happened is that both business and the public's attitude toward business have changed a great deal more in the last half-century or so than some of us seem to realize, or are willing to admit. Many of the greatest businesses used to be owned lock, stock and barrel by one man or a few men. Now, with very few exceptions, the ownership of businesses of substantial size is widespread, and the administration is in the hands of hired managers. This was the result of what has been vividly termed "the managerial revolution." That revolution made business far more productive and efficient than was formerly the case. Equally important, it brought a new concept of social responsibility and consciousness to business. This concept came in part from within, and in part it was imposed from without through laws and regulations and the sheer weight of public opinion. But, regardless of its origin, it exists.

gregate and concrete surfacing on M-76 and M-18 from US-27 eastward to Roscommon and 6.7 miles on M-144 from Roscommon eastward, in Roscommon and Crawford counties. This route serves as an important trunkline handling the tourist traffic in a resort area. The completion date for this project is August 31, 1953.

The State Highway Department has begun a study for the relocation of M-72 from Kalkaska westward to US-31 east of Traverse City. Highway Commissioner Charles M. Ziegler has announced.

The study is being made by aerial photography and is preliminary to the preparation of plans for construction work. Present M-72 between Kalkaska and Acme on US-31, northeast of Traverse City, is a gravel-surfaced road, with numerous railroad crossings and sharp turns, which offer serious traffic hazards. It has a narrow and low grade, with a poor drainage in a number of places.

YOUR MILK...

The miser loses his hearing when charity calls. With the aid of false sympathy he told lies to the poor under the mask of poverty. He collected alms from others. He will not spend and grabs everything in sight. Judging from his personal appearance and from the way he lived everybody thought him poor, but, when he died they found hidden in the hovel where he starved in his existence a hoarded wealth of gold, stocks and bonds.

Palm Sunday wasn't exactly a spring-like day, but many of the Sunday School pupils and teachers seem to have won the Battle of the Bug and were back in their regular places. Jack Welch, however, has been added to the sick list, and is home with chicken pox. Johnnie Cook was back, after several weeks in Florida. Birthday anniversaries were celebrated by Ronnie Lovell and Nancy Fenon in the Kindergarten Department; by Pauline Lutz and Marshall Atkinson in the Junior Department. Visitors included Bobby Davenson in the Nursery, Wyda Sue Jewell in the Kindergarten, Donna Bailey and Gail Jewell in the Primary, and Sharon Wright of Carleton, Michigan, in the Senior Department.

Tom Hilton, home from college for the Easter holiday, taught the Seventh grade for Mrs. Jack Fenon, and Rev. Puffer taught the Sixth for Mrs. Clarence Roberts. Miss Marian Millikin conducted the chapel service for the Senior Department, with "World Peace" as her topic.

The study class "Toward Understanding The Bible" was concluded Monday evening and registrations were continued for the new study, "Basic Christian Beliefs." The Senior Youth Fellowship met Tuesday evening. There will be no Sunday School on Easter Sunday, but those working toward attendance awards will be credited for attendance at either service. Offerings in either special or regular envelopes will be credited to the six-point records. At this time approximately thirty pupils are in line for camp awards. Increasing numbers and increasing camp fees make it increasingly difficult to finance the camping program. In the past the school has depended on the contributions of interested individuals and organizations, but with something in excess of six hundred dollars needed, the church school staff is sponsoring a Pantry Supper to be served from 5:30-7:30 p. m. on Thursday, April 8, with all proceeds to go to the Camp Fund. This type of supper is served cafeteria-style, each item costing 10c, making it a convenient way for the whole family to have "dinner out" without breaking the budget.
